The anatomy of a Rainy Lake Mantle.

The Rainy Lake Mantle Company

No fireplace is complete without a mantle. And no mantle is as distinctive as one from The Rainy Lake Mantle Company. They are as unique and individual as the trees they're crafted from.

Our mantles are made from hand-selected Northern Minnesota pine or northern white cedar logs. The logs are peeled by hand with an old-fashioned drawknife, then cut to an exact fit with chainsaws and chisels. The work is done right at your home or job site and is an integral part of the construction of your fireplace.

Your mantle can be finished in one of three ways:

- hand-planed, for the smoothest finish;
- chisel-finished, which is characterized by shallow scallops;
- or chainsaw cut, which is left naturally rough from the saw blades.

Whatever your choices, a mantle from The Rainy Lake Mantle Company will be a primary focal point of your home and a source of pride for years to come.

The mantle log is hand-scribed, cut with a chainsaw and chiseled to fit snugly into the supporting logs below it.

Checking occurs naturally during the log drying process and adds to the beauty and character of a Rainy Lake Mantle.

Logs are hand-selected from local, Northern Minnesota sawmills, then hand-peeled the old-fashioned way. You can choose either pine or northern white cedar. Both are excellent choices.
